already-cited report on Spanish music Investing in Four Hours: Robert Bradley Francois Auguste Gevaert wherein, besides producing a very detailed description of the Andalusian songs that he interpreted, he also made it manifestly clear that the vocal style he liked was one of a great virtuosity; this, he contended, made the singing of high notes easier and, united with a very good respiratory technique, meant that the cante
